Philosophy of Religion

First published Mon Mar 12, 2007; substantive revision Tue Jan 6, 2019

Philosophy of religion is the philosophical examination of the themes and concepts involved in religious traditions as well as the broader philosophical task of reflecting on matters of religious significance including the nature of religion itself, alternative concepts of God or ultimate reality, and the religious significance of general features of the cosmos (e.g., the laws of nature, the emergence of consciousness) and of historical events (e.g., the 1755 Lisbon Earthquake, the Holocaust). Philosophy of religion also includes the investigation and assessment of worldviews (such as secular naturalism) that are alternatives to religious worldviews. Philosophy of religion involves all the main areas of philosophy: metaphysics, epistemology, value theory (including moral theory and applied ethics), philosophy of language, science, history, politics, art, and so on. Section 1 offers an overview of the field and its significance, with subsequent sections covering developments in the field since the mid-twentieth century. These sections address philosophy of religion as practiced primarily (but not exclusively) in departments of philosophy and religious studies that are in the broadly analytic tradition. The entry concludes with highlighting the increasing breadth of the field, as more traditions outside the Abrahamic faiths (Judaism, Christianity, and Islam) have become the focus of important philosophical work.

Search Tips (Arama İpuçları)

Arama alanının altında yer alan bu butonuna basıldığı zaman araştırmada kullanılacak ve aramayı daha iyi yapmayı sağlayan ipuçları yer almaktadır.

• TITLE SEARCH:

If you want to search for a title that contains a word, type "title:", followed by the word.

Example: results for the search `title:Descartes` are those documents in which the word "Descartes" occurs in the title.

• AUTHOR SEARCH:

If you want to search for entries by author name, type "author:", followed by the name.

Example: results for the search `author:smith` are those documents written by authors named Smith.

• PROXIMITY PHRASE:

If you want to search for words that occur close to each other, put the words in double quotes followed by a tilde and how far apart the words may be.

Example: results for the search `"world case"~5` are those documents in which "world" is followed within five words by "case". If the number equals 1, this is the same as searching for an exact phrase.

• CASE:

Searches are not case sensitive.

Example: the search `leibniz` and the search `Leibniz` will return the same results.

• WILDCARD SEARCHES:

An asterisk (*) can be added as a wildcard symbol in the middle or at the end of a word or partial word. The asterisk will match any letter or series of letters in a single word.

Example: results for the search `logic*` are those documents in which the word "logic" or the word "logical" or the word "logicism", etc., occurs.

Example: results for the search `title:contract*` are those documents in which the word "contract" or the word "contractarianism" or the word "contractualism", etc., occurs in the title.

• MORE COMPLEX SEARCHES:

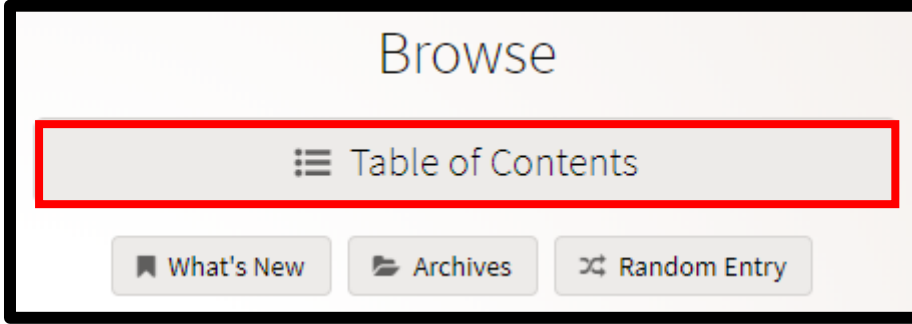

The above search operations can be combined.

Example: results for the search `title:social title:political` are those documents in which the word "social" or the word "political" occurs in the title.

Example: results for the search `+semantics +logic -title:logic*` are those documents which mention logic and semantics but whose title does not include the word "logic" nor any word that begins with "logic".
